Global Incident Notification (GIN) Secondary Public Safety Answering Point (PSAP) Test and Evaluation 2005

The number of cellular calls to 9-1-1 has been increasing every year with the increase in cellular telephones. There are currently over 50,000 emergency calls from cell phones a year. If the trend continues, cellular phones could become the source of the majority of all 9-1-1 calls. As the overall usage of cell phones to call 9-1-1 increases, the number of maritime 9-1-1 calls is also likely to increase. Acquisition of Search and Rescue (SAR)-relevant information can be streamlined by integrating the U.S. Coast Guard (CG) as a Secondary Public Safety Answering Point (PSAP) for marine distress cellular calls. In order to assess the pros and cons of Enhanced 9-1-1 (E9-1-1) integration with CG operations, the Research and Development Center established a prototype Secondary PSAP in Woods Hole, Massachusetts, monitored usage, and collected data on the calls handled during the 2004 SAR season. This final report on the project documents the installation of the CG's Secondary PSAP system (both the circuits and the customer premises equipment), discusses the costs of the system, identifies the responses to the various challenges encountered in setting up the prototype, and discusses the operational use and benefits of the system. Based on the information learned in this study, the following recommendations are made: perform a cost-benefit analysis of a full coastal E9-1-1 system, analyze the impact and value of federal E9-1-1 standards, and authorize limited Secondary PSAPs in all coastal areas where allowed by state/local regulations.

Industrial Training and Testing Howard K. Morgan 2007-03 PREFACE. THE Author of this very practical treatise on Scotch Loch - Fishing desires clearly that it may be of use to all who had it. He does not pretend to have written anything new, but to have attempted to put what he has to say in as readable a form as possible. Everything in the way of the history and habits of fish has been studiously avoided, and technicalities have been used as sparingly as possible. The writing of this book has afforded him pleasure in his leisure moments, and that pleasure would be much increased if he knew that the perusal of it would create any bond of sympathy between himself and the angling community in general. This section is interleaved with blank sheets for the readers notes. The Author need hardly say that any suggestions addressed to the case of the publishers, will meet with consideration in a future edition. We do not pretend to write or enlarge upon a new subject. Much has been said and written-and well said and written too on the art of fishing but loch-fishing has been rather looked upon as a second-rate performance, and to dispel this idea is one of the objects for which this present treatise has been written. Far be it from us to say anything against fishing, lawfully practised in any form but many pent up in our large towns will bear us out when we say that, on the whole, a days loch-fishing is the most convenient. One great matter is, that the loch-fisher is depend-ent on nothing but enough wind to curl the water, -and on a large loch it is very seldom that a dead calm prevails all day, -and can make his arrangements for a day, weeks beforehand whereas the stream- fisher is dependent for a good take on the state of the water and however pleasant and easy it may be for one living near the banks of a good trout stream or river, it is quite another matter to arrange for a days river-fishing, if one is looking forward to a holiday at a date some weeks ahead. Providence may favour the expectant angler with a good day, and the water in order but experience has taught most of us that the good days are in the minority, and that, as is the case with our rapid running streams, -such as many of our northern streams are, -the water is either too large or too small, unless, as previously remarked, you live near at hand, and can catch it at its best. A common belief in regard to loch-fishing is, that the tyro and the experienced angler have nearly the same chance in fishing, -the one from the stern and the other from the bow of the same boat. Of all the absurd beliefs as to loch-fishing, this is one of the most absurd. Try it. Give the tyro either end of the boat he likes give him a cast of ally flies he may fancy, or even a cast similar to those which a crack may be using and if he catches one for every three the other has, he may consider himself very lucky. Of course there are lochs where the fish are not abundant, and a beginner may come across as many as an older fisher but we speak of lochs where there are fish to be caught, and where each has a fair chance. Again, it is said that the boatman has as much to do with catching trout in a loch as the angler. Well, we dont deny that. In an untried loch it is necessary to have the guidance of a good boatman but the same argument holds good as to stream-fishing...

Multimedia-based Instructional Design William W. Lee

2004-04-26 Multimedia-Based Instructional Design is a thoroughly revised and updated second edition of the best-selling book that provided a complete guide to designing and developing interactive multimedia training. While most training companies develop their training programs in many different technological delivery media—computer-based, web-based, and distance learning technologies—this unique book demonstrates that the same instructional design process can be used for all media. Using just one process reduces cycle time for course development—and also reduces costs.
